Why OOKKUU?

The name OOKUU comes from the Japanese word “oku” (奥), meaning inner layer or depth. In terms of architecture it means quality, truth and purpose of a design. But in today’s rapidly globalizing world, mass production and disposability have brought easy to obtain goods, but not a higher quality of life. Therefore, we aim to bring quality hand crafted goods from Japan to the North American market. Japan has centuries of tradition and cultural heritage that coexist with modern technological innovation. Its manufacturers reflect the best of globalization’s effects on design: a mixing of old and new, quality that comes from the union of careful study of the past and consideration for the future. We hope OOKUU can serve as a vehicle in creating not only great products, but meaningful relationships between designers and users, based on a drive for quality and a balance between production and craftsmanship.

Fuk Sofa 1-seater

The FUK series is designed by Tomita Kazuhiko, one of the most robust product designers from Nagasaki, Japan. Tomita, who trained and worked in London and Milan, designed the FUK Sofa with the image of smiling people at happy events. "FUK" (pronounced as "fu-ku") means happiness in Japanese, and the FUK Sofa embodied the designer's warm nature and his unique aesthetics. This sofa is not only pleasant to look at, the carefully calculated reclined angle and firm cushions guarantee that it is also comfortable to sit on.

Kinoe Chair & Bench

"Kinoe," which means "tree branch" in Japanese, is a 2016 collection that features a unique top rail made of cedar and cypress branches, which were previously seen as "useless waste" by the timber industry. The maker took on the challenge of processing a material of non-uniform shape, and succeeded in making this beautiful chair and bench.

The tree branches used for the top rail are polished and perfectly smooth while keeping their natural shapes. No two Kinoe Benches are exactly the same.

Luxury Museum Cabinet

Cabinets are the underappreciated workhorses in most spaces: they are designed to display things inside them, though rarely do they stand out. The Museum Cabinet collection sets out to flip the traditional sentiments about cabinets, offering cabinets that are works of art themselves. Traditional finishing methods nurture the tannin in Japanese oak wood to produce remarkably soft and warm colors. The details in the design create an unforgettably elegant presence: double sliding doors, beaded molding around the frames, and five-sided glass that filters light.

The furniture pieces in our Industrial Collection are simple and robust, emphasizing the authenticity of materials and focusing on utility. They are highly functional and built to last.

Industrial

Tide Chair

Marine furniture needs to be extraordinarily sturdy while providing the maximum comfort and functionality for everyone on board. The making of this furniture calls for special techniques and know-hows. The maker started as an artisanal boat interior and furnishing workshop in Nagasaki, the oldest international port of Japan. They applied knowledge developed over the years to make beautifully designed home furniture, using the Sendan (梅檀, Japanese bead-tree) timber harvested in Nagasaki.

RIN Chair

The RIN Chair, designed by Koji Okada, is a light-weight dining chair featuring a clean half-arc seat back that also functions as the arms of the chair (hence the name "RIN", which means ring in Japanese). The simple structure provides the same support regardless of posture. The smooth line from the arms to the legs is not only pretty to look at but also pleasant to touch. This chair also features a unique combination of solid walnut/cherry wood with paulownia, a kind of wood that is deeply loved by the Japanese. The Rin Chair was one of the finalists of IFDA 2011.
